the seventeenth and early eighteenth centuries were among the worst years of the little ice age this volume attends to english texts from this period to trace associations between wintry physical landscapes and an icy inner landscape of human cruelty and tyranny whose rigors promote the ultimate chill of rigor mortis sailors seeking a polar route to the east brought terrifying reports of northern icescapes long popularly linked with the devil simultaneously concerns about increasingly cold winters at home in Britain overlapped with increased scrutiny of kingship and the church and fear of tyranny from both such fears were reflected in ongoing struggles between king and parliament during the period leading to revolution and war the binding power of ice and the power of northern winters to deface kill and bury life suggested the fall's human parallel to winter cold hearted humans as tyrannical winters who deal in death published in 1999 these essays are not deconstructive in the postmodern sense none of the authors have that depth of scepticism about knowledge claims but they are all concerned that the terms of reference of cold war enquiry have been inappropriately bounded the chapters by Murray and Reynolds specifically address the broad theoretical issues involved with paradigms and explanation the chapters by Dobson Marsh Malik Evans and Dix stretch out cold war paradigms with successive case studies of Anglo American relations the USA Britain Iran and the oil majors the Gulf states and the cold war South Africa and the cold war and Indian neutralism all five authors challenge the efficacy of neo realist analysis and explanation and critique the way that assumptions derived from that position have been used in historical explanation the chapters by Ryall Rogers and Bideleux deal with roman catholicism in east central europe with nuclear matters and with the soviet perspective each work goes beyond the limits of cold war paradigms finally pointing places the cold war in the broad context of world history these essays provide thought provoking scholarship which helps us both to nuance our understanding of the cold war and to realise that it should not be taken as an all embracing paradigm for the explanation of postwar international relations shachtman presents the fascinating story of the scientific effort to master cold from the creation of thermometers to the attainment of temperatures billionths of a degree above absolute zero both truman and eisenhower combined bully pulpit activity with presidentially directed messages voiced by surrogates whose words were as orchestrated by the administration as those delivered by the presidents themselves a review of the private strategizing sessions concerning propaganda activity and the actual propaganda disseminated by the truman and eisenhower administrations reveals how they both militarized propaganda operations allowing the president of the united states to serve as the commander in chief of propaganda activity as the presidents minimized congressional control over propaganda operations they institutionalized propaganda as a presidential tool expanded the means by which they and their successors could perform the rhetorical presidency and increased presidential power over the country's cold war message naturalizing the cold war ideology that resonates yet today of particular interest to scholars and students of political communication the modern presidency and cold war history
